

"Tri-people city"

Cultural mix of Maranaos of Lanao del Sur, Higaonons of Bukidnon, the predominantly Christian settlers and migrants from other parts of the country

Baníg

A handwoven mat for sleeping and sitting made-of from dried leaves that are sometimes dyed before being cut into strips and woven into a mat.

Chroniclers say that centuries ago, long before Legaspi's expedition reached the Philippines in 1565, the Tala-andigs and the Banhawons, two of the known peace-loving Higa-onon tribes of Mindanao, had to build an ilihan or iliyan, meaning a "fortress of defense" on the coastal plain to secure them from the frequent attacks of pirates and savage tribes.

Hence, the place to be called as Iligan.
